

Suarga Padang Padang

BALI, INDONESIA

Suarga Padang Padang is an environmentally committed boutique resort on clifftops overlooking Padang Padang's world-class surf breaks.

This resort of 36 rooms, pavilions and villas was created to promote social-environmental awareness and minimal environmental impact while still offering modern luxuries.

It's predominantly built using recuperated wood and other materials sourced from across the Indonesian archipelago. Teakwood dismantled from Borneo's Bank of Indonesia and East Java's colonial Dutch hospital has been turned into shutters. Ironwood used as bedroom floors and walls came from a disused bridge and pontoons in Borneo's jungles, while plank roads, groove-ridden from decades of vehicles, now line bathroom walls.

Double vanity sinks feature repurposed Merbau bridge rafters, scooped out and lined with copper, while villa floors display a rare hardwood from colonial-built Javanese houses.

These durable materials have been selected to endure as a living legacy, preserving the archipelago's cultural heritage.

Constructed wetlands minimize water usage and no pesticides are used in the drought-hardy gardens. The plastic-free resort applies renewable power in combination with low-energy consumption technology: solar panels produce more than enough power and many rooms feature a low energy, air-conditioned system alongside teak shutters allowing natural breezes in.

Diverse accommodation blends contemporary tropical architecture and Balinese craftsmanship with modern comforts. Muso Pentrooms, stilted Ulin Pavilions, the perfect couple's hideaway, and Suarga's fabulous private Wantilan, Jurang, Bajau villas, are all free-standing on the cliff-edge front, providing open-air dining and living spaces.

The heart of the resort can be found at Suarga's signature restaurant and lounge bar, Dugong, a semi-open bamboo structure. Dugong overlooks the infinity pool and beyond — a jaw-dropping view. The low-carbon footprint mindset extends to Nordic-inspired cuisine infused with Balinese flavours, with most produce sourced from within a 30-mile radius.
